ABSTRACT

A method of providing calibration data to a printer to achieve a true color value. An ink cartridge with a memory for storing tristimulus values measured from selected printers and from selected print substrate used to compute a color adjustment value to correct the output color data to equal the input color data.